

67
ABSTRACT

An Ethernet communications system for a power monitoring system includes an Ethernet communications device having a processor, a communications interface capable 5 of gathering, under control of the processor, real-time information from one or more slave devices. The processor and communications interface are operative for presenting the real-time information in a format useable by Hypertext Markup Language (HTML) pages.